CONSTRUCTION LAW

Construction Law Time in Construction

Author : Foo Joon Liang
ISBN : 978-967-457-182-5
Price : RM165

“Time in Construction” is a book that focuses on the crucial aspect of construction disputes, which is time. The book discusses how delays in construction projects can lead to increased costs, prompting one party to seek compensation or mitigation. The claims for delay damages or loss and expense can be made by either the employer or the contractor. If there is no entitlement to additional time, it may result in a contract termination and subsequent claims for damages.

The rights of the parties involved are primarily governed by contractual provisions. The book examines the provisions on time found in major standard building contracts used internationally and in Malaysia, such as the Fédération Internationale Des Ingénieurs-Conseils (FIDIC), the Pertubuhan Akitek Malaysia (PAM), the Asian International Arbitration Centre (AIAC), and the Public Works Department (PWD/JKR) forms of contracts.

Within the framework of these contractual provisions, the authors delve into key aspects of time-related disputes, including whether time is of the essence of a contract, and if so, its implications, the effects of delays on project progress and completion, the application of liquidated damages, entitlements to extensions of time, and the financial implications of granting extensions of time.

The book incorporates the latest decisions from Malaysian courts, particularly those from the appellate courts that establish legal precedents, as well as significant rulings from other Commonwealth jurisdictions.

Malaysian Legal System (3rd Edition)

Author : Ashgar Ali Ali Mohamed
: Muhamad Hassan Ahmad
ISBN : 978-967-457-186-3
Price : RM250

The application of the legal system varies from country to country and is primarily shaped by the unique history of a particular country. The Malaysian legal system can be traced back to British colonial rule, and the knowledge of the legal history provides the foundation from which one can begin to understand and apply the principles of constitutional, administrative, and judicial law, among others. The “Malaysian Legal System” book, which consists of thirty-five chapters, is an all-encompassing book on the legal system in Malaysia, contributed by experts in their respective fields of research and interest in this subject. It traces the origin and sources of this country’s legal system before and during the British “invasion” into the Straits Settlements, Malay States, and the Borneo States with reference to the relevant statutes and decided cases. The current application of English law in Malaysia is discussed with reference to ss. 3 and 5 of the Civil Law Act 1956 (Revised 1972). It also encompasses, inter alia, the sources of Malaysian law, the parliamentary process of law-making, the interpretation and construction of statutes, the administration of justice and the legal profession in Malaysia, including under the Syariah system. Further, the salient features of the adjective or procedural law, namely, the civil procedure, criminal procedure, and the law of evidence, are also discussed. Undoubtedly, this book is an all-embracing manuscript on the Malaysian Legal System, an excellent source of reference to students reading law and those interested in knowing the theoretical and practical aspects of the legal system in Malaysia.

CLJ REPORTS

The Industrial Law Reports or ILR showcases an impressive collection of head-noted Industrial Court awards dating back to the journal's debut in 1980. Since its inception, the ILR has strived to report as many awards emanating from the Industrial Court as possible. This includes all Collective Agreements which the court had resolved and ratified. With the rise in the number of awards, the ILR has since opted to report the more prominent awards of the Industrial Courts. What the ILR lost in volume has now been replaced with appellate landmark labour and industrial law cases from the Civil Courts. The additional appellate cases, as the feedback indicates, has made a profound impact and was heartily welcomed by both the HR and IL practitioners. The ILR subscribers are however not deprived of the vital information on the unreported awards, as such awards are listed down in a special index published at the end of the year.

& Dr Norlizah Mokhtar
ISBN : 978-967-457-125-2 (Hardcover)
Price : RM280 (WM) / RM290 (EM)

Islamic banking in Malaysia has experienced an overwhelming boom, both in terms of the practice industry and legal development aspect. For stakeholders and practitioners, the practical concern centres, almost always, on the need to ensure that the products and practices abide by the Shariah and complies with Malaysian law. It is a known fact that at times, the Shariah principles did not come on all fours with the local laws and regulations, necessitating thereby much harmonisation effort for the two standards.

The authors have provided their commentaries of the relevant case law authorities, which is a refreshing point of view distinctly enriching in addition to the judicial pronouncements of the judges. The personal opinions of the authors, therefore, contributes to the existing literature on the legalities of Islamic banking practices in this country.
